By W. J. HENDERSON.

The concert of the Symphony Society in Acolian Hail yesterday afternoon radiated good humor. Father Damrosch beamed from the podium with unceasing smiles, while he led his forces through the programme consisting of Kallinikov's first symphony (G minor), Lord Berners's "Fantaiste Espagnole," and Miecyslaw Karlowicz's violin conerto in A major, with Paul Kochanski is the soloist.

marked "first time," and two numbers by Liarounov completed the list.

In playing the Bach selections Mr. Schmitz used transcriptions by Philipp. Moor and himself, Always a brilliant technician, his performance here became a glittering tour de force in virtuosity. Bach seemed almost forgotten. Similar comments could be made of his playing in the Franck composition. The early whole, given with delightful clarity and style. The fair sized audience was entusiastic.

CHALIAPIN SINGS, BUT IS NOT AT HIS BEST Shows He Is Hampered by

Feeder Chaliapin, the distinguished laryngitis, was finally able to reappear before his waiting countrymen yester-day afternoon, when he was heard in a concert in the Hippodrome. According to the custom which he introduced at his first concert, the titles of his songs were not printed on the house songs were not printed on the house programme. Those who wished to know what he was singing were permitted to buy a little book containing the texts of all his songs, each with a number pre-fixed. Before singing one Mr. Chalia-rin announced its number, and all the listener had to do was to pick it out in the book.

Naturally Mr. challapin did not wish Naturally Mr. Challapin did not wish to remain in enforced obscurity, but it would unquestionably have been better for him to rest and recuperate a little enger. His voice was still foggy, and his singing far from devoid of evidence of labor. He was also troubled at times by coughing. It was, however, possible for him to deliver songs in a manner, and the audience seemed to be just as well pleased with him as if he had been singing his best.

McCormack. At any rate he was in much better voice in his third concert in the Hippodrome last evening than in the previous ones on October 16 and 30. His opening number was the recitative "Jehovah, Hear Me," and an air, "My Hear't Is Sore Within Me," from Beeth ven's "Mount of Olives."

This is a great number, and it is one of the things Mr. McCormack sings in a masterly manner. Among the other numbers on his list were four Irish folk songs, a new song, "The Sunrise Wakes the Lark to Sing," by his accommonist, Edwin Schneider, and another new one, "Bridal Dawn," by Easthope Murtin, Donald McBeath, as usual, played violin solos, and also, as usual, the theatre was entirely filled.
